ABOUT THIS BOOK

What this book lacks should be right away apparent. There is no price, much less a bar code, on it. There is no publisher or address to contact. And there is no copyright.

What this book has that others don't have will only become apparent upon reading it. Those contents will largely explain the absence of what is listed above.

But, to summarize in advance, the book decries anything for money's sake and especially anything hooked into Big Brother's computers. Due to the nature of its content, there is no publisher on earth who would touch it. You don't find this book, it finds you. Again, due to its content, no one would consider stealing it. And, even if they did, does one go crying to the same Satanic system that one is condemning in these very pages?

The book is kept as brief as possible deliberately and for this reason: To distill and to concentrate as much of the total truth as is possible in order to gauge people's reaction to it.

That much is done in an attempt to ascertain how much, if any, spark of life remains anywhere at this late date.

CONTROVERSY

Publicly and socially one is not supposed to bring up topics which are generally considered to be "controversial". They make people feel "uncomfortable", even "offending" certain others. Instead, one is expected to keep it nice and polite, generic and "safe", P.C. in other words, holding it to matters such as sports, the weather or one's health. In short, things that really don't matter within the grand scheme. Or is there even supposed to be a grand scheme? Would that in itself be too "controversial"?

If you should somehow fall into or so much as touch upon any of the "Big Three" subjects which can and often do pack a load of dynamite, then you are expected to keep it shallow, brief and as P.C. as humanly possible. For example, there really is no race problem, as such, only problems sociological and economical which throwing some money at, changing some laws, or trying ever harder to ignore will adjust. When it comes to religion, of course, there is out there a loving God who just wants us all to "get along". And politics... Which party of wealthy lawyers and businessmen makes the sweetest promises to ease up on the personal billfold, protect property rights and hold things together a little longer?

It's been that way now for longer than anyone living can recall. People nowadays can't conceive of things being any other way. However, anyone able to think back twenty years or more will at least be able to perceive and recognize a very definite slide. A trend, if you will. And if one has ever had anything remotely resembling standards or ideals, he will know that it is a downhill trend at that. One European observer commented to me many years ago that it seemed to them as though these Americans were trying to give it away as fast as they could. They are losing their country, their way of life, their culture and, worst of all, their identity as a people.

All of the money-throwing toward all of the innumerable social "projects", all of the quasi-Marxist legislations putting the strong arm on "equality", all of the "church-of-your-choice-ing", and all of the stuffed-shirt "candidates" through all of the phony-baloney elections have done nothing to in any way alter this trend. If there is any "issue", this is the only one: In short, the United States is visibly, decade-by-decade becoming less of an extension of White, Christian Europe, as it began, and more of an extension of the colored, superstitious Third World. Furthermore, it ought to by now be apparent to a blind man that all these many hallowed institutions of so-called democracy, far from being any part of a solution to the problem, are in working reality the facilitators of the problem itself.

At no time is it wise or socially acceptable to really delve into any of the Big Three topics which are so very controversial and that include: Race; Religion; and Politics. After all, nowadays, in mixed company, you never know who - or what - might be standing within earshot and you'd hate to be labeled with any one of their P.C., tarbrush buzz-words like "racist", or "sexist", "fascist" or the like which might easily cost you your job and, consequently, your entire standard of living, your family, etc. So you play it dumb and let them have it their way little realizing that this makes of you, even though you may for the time being represent the majority, a neutral element. The minority thus calls the shots.

Even these same minorities let it be known that "silence is acceptance".

But someone else once said that it would be the meek who would ultimately inherit the earth.

Here we truly have a great contention at least worthy of some examination if we but possess the daring and the desire, together with the will and the capacity to do some straight thinking for a change.

Regardless, race, religion and politics have always been my favorites, the only subjects for which I have any time or patience, or, for that matter, any real aptitude. I feel that if I haven't offended someone or made anyone uncomfortable, then I've failed. Because nothing else really matters but these in the long run and it is the long run that we should be dealing with.

In a previous decade there was in the news a rash of what were called car-jackings. The prime piece of advice that law enforcement at the time was giving to the public was this: "Don't get into the car with the hijacker." Reason: The hijacker will then remove you to a location and a circumstance far less favorable to you and to your survival. If it must come down to it, then let it come down to it then and there with your chances at their best.

The United States and, in truth, all of the Western nations, were literally hijacked generations ago. A very tiny elite with a peculiar agenda insinuated themselves into all of the most sensitive positions, monopolized most of the wealth and influence, bought the media, bought the politicians and, very simply, took over. Call it liberal democracy, globalism, or whatever. It is they and their agenda which are responsible for the trend I spoke of earlier.

And the average American, being the tolerant sort that he is, put up with it. In so doing he, in effect, "got into the car with the hijacker". Time is also distance and, these many decades later, he finds himself in a position far worse to do anything about the situation than at any time previous. Certainly, the situation will only grow worse with additional time given to the trend which is locked into place.

Among the handful of tiny groups crying in this wilderness is one which issues a message in the greatest of brevity: "White? Concerned?" Well, if that describes you then this message is intended for you and because it is intended for a select audience, its message doesn't have to be guarded. Indeed, for that reason, it may actually contain a real message unlike by far most of what passes for "information" today. And because I am a lover of controversy - and truth - my words don't have to be minced.

SOMETHING'S GOING ON

There are many who actually believe that all of this business on earth, the human condition, etc., is strictly by accident and insofar as the fate of man is concerned, that it is all according to man's own striving, his own imaginings. And, according to this then, the goal and the purpose of it all must come down to the chase after the accumulation of wealth and the enjoyment of its pleasures. All of this within a framework of governmental regulations, of course. Anything else must be off somewhere on the side, a holdover perhaps from less enlightened times.

I've witnessed positively that those caught up in the working world do not have the chance to stop and examine what it is that is going on around them, what it is that they actually are subject to. They don't have the chance to think. Those up a little higher in academic circles who might do some thinking, who might have access to information that is mainly suppressed by the Powers Which Be, are either deluded by their own credentials or are wholly unwilling to risk their professional reputations or careers in speculating openly that something might be amiss with today's values.

But there is something going on here that cannot be tied up entirely within the framework of some financial bottom line.

There is more than enough anomaly surrounding us that is rock-solid, documented, capable of being examined, etc., that if it should be placed together in context with ages-old religious myths, observed in the light of our most modern technology, or balanced in the kind of common sense that was a lot more common not too many decades ago... but certainly viewed minus the Orwellian "political correctitude" of most recent times, to open a window upon a panorama of a reality that most are now all but blinded to.

For one, practically nothing is by accident. Even at the lowest level, the affairs of humans and their societies are without exception determined by personalities behind the scenes. Or I should say pre-determined. For only then does a tightly controlled media go to work making it appear to the masses as though, first, it is the "right thing to do" and, second, that it has been "their idea" all along.

For another, there truly is nothing new under the sun. This even includes some really astounding technology from millennia ago which has only been retrieved from the earth and the sea most recently to be studied and confirmed. I refer mainly to high civilizations, great republics, great empires, etc. Where did they go and why ought to be our primary concern for, as the sneering, arrogant liberals and Marxist types love to recite, "Those who are ignorant of history are doomed to repeat it." Leave it to me to take a challenge like that so literally that it becomes both uncomfortable and offensive to those who most like to toss it around.

Yet for finally another, the ancient evidence is equally clear that every bit of this was seen and predicted thousands of years ago, up to and including even all of the conspiratorial activity I mentioned earlier. And so nothing, therefore, happens by chance. Even the biggest of the self-supposed "big-dealers" from behind the scenes are under close scrutiny, their own machinations already having been seen and revealed in texts thousands of years old.

Someone or something is out there at the end of it all just waiting for things to catch up, to where he or it can say, "I told you so." And I do not refer to anything weird or obscure when mentioning ancient texts. I speak only of those books collected together in the Bible, something found in most homes commonly today.

The same entity who would play such a prank upon his own adversaries as to allow them their own "powerful delusions" might be expected to plant openly the entire game plan to be picked up and read by anyone and everyone... fully knowing that hardly one in a million would have the capability of so doing and, after so doing, would never in a million years be heard or heeded by any of the rest. That reveals a real sense of irony as well as a sense of humor.

Obviously then, I believe that these factors lead to but one conclusion: That there most certainly is and has to be a higher, ultimate purpose to these goings on here on earth.

The challenge I've found is this: The ability to determine whether a thing is real or whether it is not. This is more important today than ever before because most of what is out there that passes as "information" - and there has never been more of it than now - is patently false, incomplete or otherwise misleading, often deliberately so. Beware always of the "garbage in, garbage out" syndrome as it applies to even the most sophisticated of today's computers. Lord help the average human mind in coping with it.

If a thing is seen to be false or unreal, then it should be dismissed and done away with. (I might inject here that even a lie can be instructive if it is first determined to be a lie, then it is determined where it originated from, and finally what the lie involved.) If, however, a thing is seen to be real then it is our critical duty to know and understand its form and, from there, its implication. I'll state further that this is the key I've found to the unlocking of the myths that have accompanied our people and our civilization from the very beginning.

It may seem overly obvious that a thing is either real or it is not. This is important. Not whether you'd like for it to be real, or whether a preponderance of opinion says that it is real, or even whether certain laws of the state insist that it is real on pain of punishment should you question or doubt. Only whether it is actually real or not is all that counts.

IN TEN WORDS OR LESS

Deceivers, hacks and blowhards give themselves away by their own very wordiness, their own verbosity. Ask any "expert" as to what's going on here and he'll write you a very long, dull and confusing book, all full of possibilities and interpretations, some of which could be based on the latest research but more likely based upon the most current bias. One can study that bias as it changes with the times. One should also realize that the truth - or God - doesn't change, ever.

A real trick, or achievement, is the ability to take the most obvious of all and bring it down to the fewest possible words.

Here is my contribution to that: What's really going on here can be tied up in the following eight words... This is a DNA colonization from deep space.

That says it all insofar as form is concerned. However, much more can be added to this with regard to its implications.

ANECDOTE

Regardless of the area you choose to examine there will be endless anecdotal evidence. Perhaps the best example of this is the subject of an extraterrestrial presence in our atmosphere, or in earthly affairs, or just the presence of extraterrestrials, period. Lies and hoaxes? Certainly and in abundance. But if only one-tenth of one percent of these reports, or these anecdotes, is real then the entire case is established.

And I have long been convinced that this particular case has been made beyond the shadow of any reasonable doubt. It is well and good to continue to collect and examine new evidence but, as I said, the case is made.

It used to amaze me how the controlled media would flirt around with the shattering truth in some of their pseudo-documentaries. The answer, of course, is that they were smart enough to hold it to the level of mere anecdote, allowing it to die right where it fell. Never would they dare to go on into the realm of greater implication.

The phenomenon of extraterrestrials is an excellent example but only one of an endless number. Conspiracy is yet another huge area for these anecdotes. It's long been "out" about the Japanese attack upon Pearl Harbor having been known in advance due to code breaking. But the implication? Why would "our" government choose to sacrifice thousands of servicemen this way? The Kennedy assassination, likewise, is commonly known to have been an "inside" job. Yet, again, why would "our" government want to kill the president? And why would "our" media then bend way over backward to cover it up?

These things amaze me. Or, better put, that people are somehow able to make of them isolated incidents amazes me. People can't see patterns. As with the study of history, they learn names, dates and places but can't see principles. It's all rendered practically useless. Maybe the "iceberg" has more than one tip...

The mistake is to box yourself in by establishing a cult, a fetish, out of these very same anecdotes and insisting always, "See! See here!!" No, the task is rather to take the established fact and now move on toward getting at the greater meaning, the implication of it all. Not like the fabled blind men who each gave a different description of the elephant, but a display of an ability to tie it all in together to form an accurate picture.

To do otherwise is to run the risk of getting yourself classified as just one more kook, crank or nut. So the great adversary realizes and so does he depend.

THE DOMESTICATED APE

If this is but a DNA colonization from space then what is the human being other than a domesticated, house-broken ape? Conventional science admits that humans are only 2% removed from a chimpanzee according to their shared DNA. But it was German philosopher Friedrich Nietzsche who, over a century ago, stated that man was a rope stretching between the animal and the Superman. A rope stretching over an abyss. Between these two observations - the scientific and the philosophical - we may begin to catch a glimpse of the actual situation. And it could be at this point that the use of the myth-busting that I brought up before could cinch the matter.

At least one question should arise now: If we are indeed domesticated apes, who was it that domesticated us? That would, of course, be God.

From the Bible, the very first words out of God's mouth were,

"Come, let us make man in our own image, after our likeness." Either it is real or it is not. If it is real then it can only assume the form of the very DNA colonization from space that I originally brought up. For, after all, what else? Something "spiritual"? Something open-ended that anyone may attach any meaning to that they choose? You might as well then say that it never happened for, if it did happen, you may be certain it only happened one way.

Then to the even higher implication. The statement, as presented in the Bible, also directly implies a group conversation. Well, of course. Myth? Certainly, because of its tremendous age, its endless retellings, the reality that all notion of such incredibly high tech necessary for such a thing was lost - but has now been rediscovered - even the poetic license of the ancient tellers. But all of the living evidence is still right here, all around us. And it fits perfectly.

Myth is fact, knowledge, wisdom, history and reality that has faded and dimmed with the passage of untold time right along with the very unstable condition of man's supposed civilizations. Again, conventional history admits that man was much dumber in 400 AD than he was in 400 BC. No, it isn't "fairy tale" the way my generation thought it to be in the middle of the twentieth century. Our science and our archaeology today, our regained knowledge and understanding, is all going toward proving it out. If only we can line it up together we might know the full truth. But it is the way knowledge gets lost in the first place, plus the consequences of that, and how it is rediscovered that is a principle by itself of critical importance.

The shallow thinkers - and that will be by far the most - will stop right away and comment that this idea can't be right because, obviously, all human types don't look alike. Did God have more than one face? That one they don't like to contemplate, however, and so they leave it up to the modern "wisdom" that somehow exposure to the sun and other environmental factors have made the difference since the dawn of creation when we all had "one mother".

The theories are as many as they are varied. And finally it comes down to "belief". They throw up their hands in resignation, retreating behind the most easy and convenient idea - the least controversial - and cap that off with the insistence that it doesn't even matter, that all that matters is what a person "believes", what kind of an individual he is. (And to go against this is to run the risk of being called a "racist"!)

But by virtue of the fact that we are here, that we are the way we are, etc., we may be certain that something very real did take place a very long time ago. It was no accident. It had a very definite purpose. And because we may know all of this, we may also know that it could only have taken place in one way. Interpretations and all kind of wishful thinking aside, don't we owe it to ourselves to at least try to get to the bottom of it? After all, could anything possibly be more important?

One mother, indeed, who first crawled from the sea and gave rise to every living species of creature which today roams upon the land. Yes. The similarities between every species bear this out undeniably. But so what? What about delimitation, specialization, development, even destiny? The high and low ends of the spectrum? How far will the insane notion of "equality" anywhere within nature go?

Fully accepting Darwin's theory of evolution as being a fact and a reality, with more than sufficient hard evidence abounding to support it - apart from the human condition which it cannot explain - what about the concept of these inter-galactic explorers and colonizers, once having identified the most highly evolved species on the planet, the great apes, then having gone on to experiment with more than one breed of ape using their own DNA?

Sources more ancient than the Bible - those of the Sumerians - claim that this is what took place about a half a million years ago on earth. Genesis is but an abridged version of that. I dare say we could do it ourselves in the present. And if someone could traverse deep space a half a million years ago to come here, it would seem to me they had a purpose in mind. Not only that but I think that they would have had the capability to do anything else they chose.

Experiments are just that. Would they have stopped with only a single breed of ape or would they have tested with them all? Would it not be reasonable to have expected greater or lesser results from the varying species? The dullest of all the great apes is the African gorilla, who is black. The brightest is the African chimpanzee who, under his dark hair, is white. Somewhere in between is the orangutan, found only in Asia.

The most successful of these experiments, the "sons of God", might be expected to look more like God than any of the rest. More like God and less like the animal that they sprang from, that is. Furthermore, the true sons of God are going to act like their father and become civilizers, technocrats, explorers and colonizers in their own right. Eventually they themselves will reach back out into space and begin the process all over again. This is destiny and it only comes through development. And this only describes the White race.

Right alongside this great potential for destiny, however, exists a terrible danger. The very one to which Nietzsche was alluding back in the nineteenth century. If you will note, animals in the wild do not do two things: They do not have mental problems; and they do not crossbreed. Domesticated breeds do. A flaw in the plan? A case of imperfect or incomplete development? Wolves have very tightly structured societies and will never interbreed. Dogs, on the other hand, are notorious both for their neuroses and their promiscuity. The same comparison applies between apes and human types.

To make matters worse, in the case of the domesticated ape, the human being, there is the presence of a mutated intelligence. Possessing a power of reason and logic far above the animal and yet still part of the animal. An animal with the capabilities of the Gods? It could be a recipe for a monster.

Evolution provides and perfects that which the creature must have for his survival. Therefore, evolution cannot explain the presence of the cerebrum within the human skull as, even today science doesn't fully understand its powers and, certainly, humans aren't fully able to tap its resources. When Saint Paul admonished his readers to be "spiritual", not "carnal", he was referring to the use of the God-given brain, the cerebrum, over the use of the older, animal brain, the cerebellum.

The human being must in many cases create for himself an artificial atmosphere, i.e., heated shelter, for the sake of survival. A species would not "evolve" toward a state like that. The intelligence for it would have to be present first. The human being is a mutation, not a product of natural evolution. There was indeed a moment of creation. The uncomfortable part enters when we begin to consider the form it must have taken. But, I say again, if it did occur, then it did have a form. One form, not a choice of many. And nothing could be of greater importance for us than to get as close as we can to a full understanding of that.

Heightened reason and logic, yes, but not quite high enough. And so laws were imparted by the Creator to safeguard human societies as well as human breeding so that the grand experiment wouldn't be lost. However, it has seemed as though once any one of man's civilizations has reached a certain height or maturity, all of this is breached and collapse - social, technological and genetic - is the result.

LIKE FATHER, LIKE SON

The offspring will take after the parent. Human offspring who never knew their own parents will not only look like them but act like them. It's simply imprinted in the genetic make-up. A father somewhere out in the heavens or a father somewhere here on earth. It's only a matter of waiting for the common traits to show themselves in the true children.

As children, we would love to play "house", or "fort" or whatever else. The old joke about the box that the expensive Christmas gift came in being appreciated more than the gift itself is quite true. But there was a big, fine house right there. Why bother about some cardboard box or some trash lumber lean-to? Well, children being what they are - not mature - will want to go off on their own with things they can understand and control outside of their father's house. Playing "make-believe", as though they are the adults, is great "fun".

The children will grow up and have their own real families and houses and the cycle will repeat. But in comes the question: of exactly how "mature" are the adults? Older, more set, more disciplined perhaps but my experience has taught me that, for the most part, they remain the same children just as some of the writers of the books of the New Testament refer to them.

There would appear to be some sort of glass ceiling even to the development of supposed adults in their maturity. Even the greatest kingdoms and empires of the earth have been very temporary and flawed things. Compared to whatever, wherever the real fathers from space came from, the best that the earth has ever had to offer amounts to nothing more than the cardboard box out in the back yard. Yet the longing and the drive remain present.

Human beings all - I suppose - some breeds display this trait better than others, again pointing directly to who is closer to the father. The "cargo cult" of the Second World War in the South Pacific is a prime example. Dark, practically black, natives on some very remote island watched in amazement as American Seabees arrived to construct an air base as part of the war effort. The war ended and the Americans together with their planes departed, never to return. The natives, yearning for a return of the "gods", took bamboo, or whatever they had available, built their own "airplanes", placed them on the abandoned runway and waited... Forlornly.

Here were actual adults doing exactly as children. The implication? Obviously, there are permanently immature races of people. They don't have the stuff within them to develop, to progress. Do not be taken in by the fatal error of thinking that just because they may be trained by ourselves, may be given our language, a haircut, a suit of clothes, be baptized, given citizenship, etc., that they ever can or will carry within themselves the capacity for any destiny, much less ever be capable of passing it along.

Nonetheless, our people actually try to do this very thing just as they have always tried to do it. That has been the reason for the collapse of their civilizations as well as for their erasure as a people and a species. Man becomes his own "God". He can create his own "image", his own "equal", and then he will mate with it. Thus he destroys himself.

The varying gradations, from lowest to highest, of the varying human types to create or to bear culture - or the absence of these - are there to be witnessed and studied. The differences are huge. "The only difference is skin color," the fools like to say! Finding them in their own setting, certainly the darker the species, the more primitive the existence. And certainly, absolutely, to mix one's own genes with that of coloreds of any type is to commit the worst kind of sin possible against the Creator for it is a direct attack against and reversal upon his highest work.

This is another, even closer look at the nature of the great experiment which is now approaching its climax on earth with regard to the human condition and the destiny of man. Even as man's - or, rather, the White man's - technology approaches the Godlike, his moral underpinning is allowing his genetic integrity along with his culture to slip badly to the point where they now are nearing total collapse.

What will happen next?

FALSE GODS AND MAN-MADE RELIGIONS

The great lessons of history are these: That history is the story of White development and, as such, it is cyclical with the rise and fall of White fortunes; That all great, i.e., White, civilizations die in exactly the same way, for the same reasons; And that only the White race is ever responsible for great and classic civilizations. The bottom line to all of this is that once White genes have been polluted with that of lesser breeds, greatness can never be re-achieved.

The question of why high civilizations go rotten and die has also inspired many long and tedious volumes which leave the reader knowing less than when he went in. But it too has a maddeningly simple answer if only one wants to face up to it: Societies fall apart and go to hell because they can. Dire necessity is the best protector of all as far as keeping human affairs in line is concerned. Forward motion. But once every challenge is met, every danger conquered and things have become totally according to man's own dictates, and worse, there is now leisure, etc., then the actual danger sets in.

Marriage, as a prime example, not too long ago was an absolute necessity for the parties directly involved as well as for the society - the species - as a whole. It was the foundation in the present and the basis for all future generations, without which the future itself was placed in the gravest jeopardy. Today it isn't seen that way. "Self-actualization" seems to be the thing. The very minute the "fun" or the "novelty" wears off, divorce is easy (if expensive.)

They'd have it no other way and yet they talk on about "values" as though they realize that something is lost, missing, all the while having no idea the nature of what it is. Try to tell them and you are an instant "fascist". It would be instructive to examine instead the nature of the governing so-called "values" as they are in the present which have been and still are leading to such social and genetic disintegration.

"Why do bad things happen to good people?" This is the perfect example of the almost total misconception of what God is and what the true purpose of being is. A very great man once posed and answered this momentous question: What is life? Life is the nation. It is indeed the whole and not the sum total of parts which matters. Surely, we each one are a separate experiment in biology but it was from the beginning the life of the nation which was all that really counted. This is a breeding experiment, not a personality contest. We'll take up what is meant by "bad" and "good" later on.

But I assure you, God isn't dead, only the belief system. Man parted company with God a long while ago and since went on to invent a false deity of his own, changeable to suit his own changing whims. This falsehood is what is worshipped in these churches today and it is the guiding spirit behind all of today's politics, education, philosophy, culture and everything else. It is the "democratic" spirit, it is the Marxist spirit. It boils down to superstition: Superstition being defined as belief in the absence of facts. Conversely, it could also be disbelief in the presence of facts.

This man-created "God" is no more real or valid than any stone or wooden idol carved by any savage. And so, with absolutely no moral leg whatsoever to stand upon, it truly does fit in with the democratic principle that "my brand of garbage is as valid as your brand of garbage." (For those who are interested, the difference between the democrats and the Marxists is that the Marxists at least have the wherewithal to tolerate no brand of garbage apart from their own.) Proof? Certainty? There have been few actual "smoking guns" to prove murder cases in courts of law. Usually it is the best circumstantial evidence that gains the conviction. But we know it did happen and that it only happened in one way. It is not a matter of "take your favorite pick."

Again, it is obviously supposed here today that what is going on here is some sort of personality contest, something having to do with "do-goodism". Merely act a certain way. Pretend, in other words. Everything must be "nice", be "fair". Yet inquire of any prey or predator in the wild about any of this and see your result. This, once more, is a breeding experiment - a colonization - and remains purely scientific, with man as part of nature and fully subject to the laws of nature. There is no room for the abstract, no room for sentimentality where the life of the species is involved.

Worse, it is only the White race which possesses the capacity for abstract thought to come up with such insanity. You do not see it among colored societies. There is no "charity" coming our way from the Third World. Theirs as yet remains the upward crawl, the grim struggle for daily survival. There is no room among them for suicidal dreams of Utopia. And they are outnumbering us at a rate of more than ten to one in the world. How much longer will such insanity be indulged?

"Democracy". Managed confusion. Talk of "rights". Once more, check in with the predator and his victim regarding the validity of so-called "rights". It's an invention of man, not God. You've heard all about "the church of your choice", "the party of your choice", etc. And, assuredly, each one of these does deal in garbage and, as stressed earlier, one brand of that is as good as any other. But our concern here isn't more garbage. It is a search for reality and truth.

God created our blood. He did not create "belief".

In a democracy, you may believe that you are a pair of needle-nose pliers. It is your absolute, constitutionally guaranteed right. You may believe it, alright. But does that make it a reality? And if you believe in it hard enough, would that make it real? You may form a political organization of walking, talking needle-nose pliers and run candidates for office. Is it now become reality? You may erect a giant statue of a great needle-nose pliers and gather together your fellows and bow down to it in worship. Reality now? Or does all of this only serve to separate you from reality?

Millions of otherwise good men have gone to war to die and to kill others for this concept. Toss into the equation a controlled media dedicated to lies and disinformation and, again, as even applied to the most sophisticated of computers, the old adage of "garbage in, garbage out" holds true. At this rate, what chance is there of ever being able to effectively sort things out? Are you beginning to get the idea?

Add the presence of fanatics and zealots, etc., who'll stop at nothing to force any issue via the passage of "laws", police enforcement, terror - both subtle and the more overt - in order to make fantasy into reality and you have achieved from out of democracy, communism. As with the case of the Soviet Union which, after the taking of countless millions of innocent lives, did a huge belly-flop in the face of God's eternal truth, leaving only the damage behind in its wake.

Believe me, there are just the same sort of fanatics and zealots in control right here, right now and it has been so for longer than anyone can recall. It is just that they are shrewd and sophisticated enough to rely upon, rather than naked force and overthrow, the previously mentioned managed confusion. Knock the proper slant somewhat off base and then be satisfied that time will take care of the rest. It works! It used to require centuries for civilizations to go from healthy to rotten. Here it has required less than one.

The first time I personally heard the term "self-actualization", I thought I'd choke. The very keynote of this managed confusion is and must be individualism. How else can it succeed ultimately? There must be no cohesion of any kind. The nation is thus fractured, the community is fractured, the family is fractured, relationships are fractured. Now it is down to the individual. That's the next-to-last step. The final one is the irreversible loss of genetic identity. After all, in a meaningless, throw-away kind of world, isn't one sex partner as good as any other? Accident, you say?

They are "free". Free to do anything which, under the kind of circumstances which have now come to prevail, generally means to dissipate and to self-destruct.

A last word on life as the nation: Man has ceased to recognize the nation as the greater tribe, the truly extended family. He now only sees it as the abstract it has become: Some manner of corporate goings-on contained within the lines he has drawn upon a map. The nation, in truth, is one blood created by God. It is not one hybridized blood brought about by man's own carelessness, selfishness and lust. And in that eternal sense, the United States is not a nation at all, it is a new Babylon. The Whites contained within its political boundaries are, in the words of the Bible, a remnant, subject to alien and false laws and values and in constant and growing jeopardy of losing their final and most precious asset... their purity of blood.

DELUSION

"If they could see their game, would they play it?" That is, of course, a trick question as impossible as the chicken and the egg. The issue is one of full awareness versus any stage less than that. If one is truly aware, then the proper attitude as well as course of action should be clear to properly follow. If one is not fully aware, if he is only partially aware, then no course of action can possibly be appropriate to the situation as it exists for he is, in effect, struggling about blindly or at least in various stages of blindness.

Man is a part of nature and subject to all of its laws. As already covered, within nature there are predators and there are their natural prey. The false and insane doctrines of equality applied anywhere in nature, of universal love, etc., teaches that there is no such thing as competition or natural enemies among human kind, that good breeding - as it is applied to dogs, cows and horses - isn't applicable to man. No struggle between various breeds or sub-species of man? Impossible or immoral to breed a better man?

All of that has to be a lie or a delusion. A lie coming from those who know better and a delusion for those falling for it. There are millions upon millions of fools who do believe in such sweet falsehood and, by so doing, make of themselves a natural prey for any who are more closely in tune with their own natural instincts. And what of any who would consciously and deliberately sow such falsehood among an unsuspecting populace? Do you suppose it can't happen, that it isn't happening?

The White race has an impossible time of understanding the way a deadly parasite in human form would attack. Certainly not in the kind of honorable, head-on manner which they themselves might conceive of.

THE OLD MYTHS

The term "myth" is defined as usually being a legendary narrative that presents part of the beliefs of a people or explains a practice or natural phenomenon. I used to be convinced that the Bible was written - or couched - as it was because man of two or three thousand years ago simply had no other means of conveying things so super high-tech as to appear "super-natural". However, lately I've come to believe that the strange language was adopted deliberately, for much the same reason that Jesus spoke in the form of parables, that is, to keep the message over the heads of those for whom it was not intended or who might otherwise be hostile to it.

There's a definite draw-back to this strategy, however, and it is that neither can the average individual fathom the true meaning of it, leading to the weird mish-mash that passes for a "belief system" today. But then a comprehensive understanding of the story contained in the books of the Bible leaves one knowing that the conclusion is foregone anyway. So, perhaps it all comes down to two types of people: Those who realize that this is a play that already has its ending; And those running about in circles imagining that they can somehow "change things".

One of the most interesting theories I've encountered has it that the pantheon of Greek and Roman gods was based upon the story of Jacob, or Israel, and his twelve sons. Time line, the pattern of migrations, etc., would rule it in as a complete possibility. The chief of the Norse gods, Odin or Wotan, is known to have been a real person who led a White exodus from out of Egypt before that of Moses. But, to the best of my knowledge, none of these related, offshoot belief systems contains the full sweep of the Bible itself which starts from the very beginning and goes all the way to the very end of the White experience on earth. In short, they lost something in the translation. They became closer to fairy tales than real truth. They became frozen superstition. They died.

The essence of the superstition that ever comes to surface in a society which has become cosmopolitan is the one of equality among human types. The form now comes ahead of the function. In their boundless conceit they somehow are convinced that the mere acceptance of this falsehood "ennobles" the individual who carries it, thus making of him the equal of anyone else sharing the same delusion. Well, maybe in the final analysis it does. They all wind up in the same oblivion, the same hell together. The problem I have is the question of whether people who are born innocent, to become victimized by lies and distortions waiting to poison their minds and their spirits, actually deserve this kind of fate. And right here enters all the talk of the "salvation" heard of within the Bible. Again, not some happy crap but a concept very real and immediate, then and now.

"I told you so," isn't worth very much of a damn. People don't "wake up", at least not in time. A people may recover from anything except miscegenation, or race-mixing. So went Egypt, Greece, Rome and who knows how many others. And there are no refunds on this kind of error. It's not like buying a lemon of an automobile.

One thing I've learned is that nothing which has stood the test of time ever started out as B.S. That certainly includes the Church. Otherwise, of course, it never would have lasted. However, all things left in the hands of man do finally end up as B.S. and, again, this too includes the Church. Here is a principle, indeed. We need to understand how it became that way.

For a thousand years the old myths may have worked for us as a people. But mainly, my suspicion is, because we didn't really have to rely upon them. As of a thousand years ago, the worst dangers were past for us: Armed invasions of Europe by Moors, Turks, Huns, Mongols, etc., all defeated and driven back. The wholesale expulsion of subversive types, of alien parasites from within our midst, etc., was accomplished fact. All of this having been achieved only through the most super-human of effort and sacrifice and we could well afford to feel secure and go on about our business of building our culture and our civilization, of conquering, colonizing and exploiting the rest of the world that we had tamed - exactly the way the Covenant was given to Abraham by God.

The myths, as they had become, were about as useless as the proverbial teats on the boar hog. And even less understood than that. From emergency to security and the context is lost. Minus their immediacy, their proper context, the myths were relegated to some superstitious business having to do with some "other-worldly" plane. They no longer had anything to do with relevancy, anything to do with here-and-now reality.

For a thousand years simple and common folk could pour into their churches and receive some ages-old message, as often as not in a language they themselves couldn't even understand, and all would still be well for the family and for the nation, again, because all "evil" had been physically vanquished and driven far away. But then things began to relax.

Parasites began to creep back in. "Tolerance" became a watchword. Abstract notions of "democracy", etc., took root and brother would go off to kill brother in the name of this sort of nonsense, all to the benefit of strangers in our midst. Finally, "globalism". Insane notions like "equality". The complete distortion of what once was our culture by these same internal aliens. Meaninglessness, aimlessness. And "evil" makes its comeback. But the old myths are found to be in a hopelessly dilapidated condition and are in no way up to the task of girding the people to the renewed threat of "evil", of mortal danger, having been reborn against them. They begin to fall like flies.

But it is necessary here to now drop the quotation marks from around the word evil so as to be able to bring our terms and our understanding up into present-day reality, so as to give it true meaning. And here, to be sure, will enter controversy.

The churches and their old myths have the people on guard and looking for a mythologized "evil" that doesn't exist, a Devil they'll never meet, while the actual evil overwhelms them unopposed.

While myths they may be, they yet may be properly interpreted so as to allow the underlying truth to reveal itself. For me, it happened this way: In reading the tale of Moses and the burning bush, God gave his actual name to Moses as being "I Am. That I Am", or Yahweh in Hebrew, Jehovah in Greek. It didn't require much to be able to expand that to "There Only Is What There Is". Meaning one reality, of course. What could best describe the one reality other than the laws of physics, of biology, geometry, mathematics, etc.? Now there can be no variation upon any of these things. You either recognize them, or you do not. You either are aware of them and their eternal truth, or you are not. Among permanently immature types, there may be a thousand false "interpretations" of these principles, of course, but we see all around us where that leads in terms of human misery and suffering. There yet remains only the one reality.

The White man for a thousand years of Western, Christian civilization was adept at, first, seeing and, then, adopting into practice, these scientific realities, and, for this, he was blessed by God, the father of it all, again, in precisely the way God's Covenant to Abraham stated. That was, of course, until lately.

And so the ages-old argument over what really constitutes "good" and "evil". Today, of course, they like to think they have done away with the argument via the "logic" that "whatever feels good..." Or, "as long as it doesn't hurt someone else". Or "the eye of the beholder", etc. Rather like a modern abstract painting which can be anything you want it to be but which, in reality, is nothing at all. "Democracy" at its very height. Best of all, "I at all times represent good," "We are at all times the good guys," and so forth. All one hundred percent subjective and fully at the mercy of popular change.

Yet in the modern world there stands an absolute icon of evil. That is the image of Adolf Hitler and all that is represented by Nazism. Funny thing, though, all that was supposedly done away with in the last century. Didn't the "good guys" win the war? If that were so, everything ought to be well and good. But the Bible ends with absolute evil in command of the whole earth. One thing's for sure, it ain't Hitler.

Try this instead: If God represents physics and there can be no variance from those laws, then would not confusion and distortion represent evil, while clarity and purity stand for good?

Because there truly is but only one reality and any true intelligence will be found in full tune with that. All else is evil. All else is error and error is what is meant by sin. And we all know what the wages of sin is.

Again, beware of wordiness. Between the "eight words" imparted closer to the beginning of this regarding DNA and the little ditty just given as to the real nature of good and evil, not much more needs to be added. But something like this would by necessity put the fakers, the liars and the blowhards straight out of business. It might also close the churches, the universities, the capital buildings, etc. It would cut into profits. Or could we be regarding all the same things here?

THREE FACES OF GOD

Take a modern helicopter and touch down on some undiscovered island amidst a tribe as yet still in the Stone Age and - voila! - you are "God". Depart back into the sky the same way and the natives will set into stone the story of the day of your visitation and it will be retold around their campfires from that time, forward. It will enter their myth, their legend, their religion. How common is it all over the earth of the tales of the "White Gods"? Except that these stories go back thousands of years.

In several places then we have discussed the celestials, as Saint Paul referred to them. And I'm beginning to prefer that term instead of extraterrestrials because it has less of a "kooky" connotation to it. Tons of well-documented literature abound, easily accessible, pointing unmistakably to celestial interaction with ancient man. The Bible says as much. These authors claim that the celestials helped give these ancients their civilization. But none of them dare to suggest that the same celestials did a lot more than that: They actually created, mutated, man from out of animals.

We've touched upon the next face which amounts to the eternal laws of nature and of physics. Cause and effect. To be in line with this truly can and does bring blessings. Ancient man may well have needed to attach some sort of "god" to these things, i.e., the rain, the bounty of the field, etc., but we today should see it for what it is. However, it still remains that to fly in the face of this will get you "broken with a rod of iron."

There is one more face that another great man referred to as Inscrutable Providence, and I believe it because I've seen and experienced it too many times to doubt it. No, I'm not departing suddenly from my own course of logic and facts into some vague area of hope and desire. It's when coincidence becomes way too much to be coincidence any longer. I'm convinced this counts as an extension of the same physics that we've been discussing but one that is only now beginning to be understood by science.

Phenomena that cannot be understood gets tossed into the bin commonly known as "supernatural". If you just think about it, there really can be no such thing. I joke nowadays that if we'd had this or that gimmick common today back in my childhood, we'd have been burned as a witch. Not too far-fetched and a perfect illustration. But it is the area of parallel dimensions, or universes, of on-going past, present and future, all of it simultaneous, all of it as real and solid as the dimension we now find ourselves in, that I now refer to. Science now states that there are people as real as ourselves there as yet unborn here, or, for that matter, people alive there who have already died here. But, to my knowledge, no one has yet tried to claim that we ourselves are there presently, a few moments, years or decades younger or older. Why or how else would or could the Bible say something like, "Whatever is loosed on earth is also loosed in heaven"?

Our own poor science begins to grasp that if one could move at the speed of light, then he could manipulate time itself. So, instead of travelling in a straight line over countless light years, why not just slip in and out of dimensions? Instead of a place, why not a time? Here would be found the basis for mythological afterlife, reincarnation, heaven, hell, ghosts, even premonition, ESP, deja-vu, etc.

I don't think then that it is a stretch of any sort to imagine any beings who could thus not only traverse space but time itself, to appear on distant planets and to create human life replicating their own, to also utilize their capabilities to now and then lend a helping hand where and when it is most critical. After all, Paul himself cautioned to be careful when entertaining a stranger for one could be entertaining an angel.

For the astute, to know the way things are heading and why, to be aware of how these super-beings would expect and want you to act, to fully know the nature of your enemy - Satan, the adversary - then you can, most of the time get into line with it and spare yourself a lot of unnecessary grief and wasted effort. And, once more, from out of mythology, here is the basis for prayers being answered.

Consider ancient Egypt. Their civilization reached back to a time when these perfectly physical and scientific principles were known, recognized and in common use. Then, as ever, things slid into superstition. Their blood was polluted with that of Negroes from the south and there was no way back. But a clouded memory of some of it remained. The universal symbol of the medical profession, the caduceus, the intertwined serpents, goes back to Egypt. The symbology of it may have made no sense for the ensuing millennia until we ran upon the double helix of the DNA formation.

Sadly, when one brings up Egypt, the image of mummies springs to mind. Very apparently, in Egypt's dying days, that is, its recorded history, there was a craze for mummification, the hope of living again. In theory, we could today take some of this preserved DNA and create a clone of that individual. But of course the clone would have no memory or knowledge of its original form. Perhaps that would explain the great care taken to inscribe the person's entire life history all around the walls of the tomb, to be seen and read by the reawakened clone.

But, "Catch 22", however. With deepening superstition and loss of real wisdom, hand-in-hand came increased race-mixing thus adding fuel to the fire and speed to the downward spiral. The original, White stock would have become totally polluted and the entire civilization collapsed, becoming subject to further alien invasions, etc. Even the language itself was lost for thousands of years until Whites from Europe returned in the nineteenth century to excavate and discover the Rosetta Stone which unlocked it again. In the meantime, however, by far the majority of mummies were pillaged by grave robbers and either ground into "medicine" or burned as fuel.

A cult of death, rightfully so, it does appear to us today.

Any parallels with the present? We witness these people today foregoing having children while spending thousands of dollars on plastic surgery in order to "look young" perpetually. Rather, they look like living mummies. There is cryogenics which can freeze the body in order to await a time when technology has advanced to the point where disease and death have been conquered, whereupon reanimation might take place. What if the power goes out and doesn't come back on? Aside from too many Whites not reproducing themselves, far too many are producing bastardized offspring with colored aliens. That plus the skyrocketing colored birthrate, not to mention the unchecked flow of illegal, colored immigration. Egypt all over again but at a much accelerated rate.

All ego, all the individual, all ashes. No God.

CHOICES

Maybe choices in the area of a new automobile, a new toothpaste, etc. But in the area of anything so critical as a worldview, a philosophy of life, never. Membership in the nation, similarly, can't be anything frivolous, like joining a club or the like. Not being a matter of having been born on a certain piece of real estate or having legally sworn out the proper set of documents. Creation only happened one way and there was no amount of "legalese" involved in it. The moment anything so fundamental as that gets relegated to a question of "choice" or make-believe, then at the same time all reason, fact and logic have abdicated and fairy tale and "political correctness" have taken over.

God created race. The nation is a matter of blood. Only one race has demonstrated a potential for upward development, the White race, and, therefore, only it has anything to lose genetically. Therefore, only it has anything to protect. It did not happen in more than one way, there is not more than one purpose. And, therefore, somebody - quite a few somebodies - are wrong, just plain wrong. Any worldview's reason for being is to safeguard and perpetuate those people who hold it. For that reason, it must be based on reality and not wishful thinking, error or lies as is today's belief system.

So then wouldn't the presence of "choices" in such an area amount to the promotion of just the very distortion and confusion I mentioned earlier as being what in reality is meant by evil? Is this what was meant by the commandment which said, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me"? Multi-culturalism, indeed.

PURPOSE

They argue back and forth between evolution and creation, that it must be all one way or the other. But why not both? Why not that in the universe order does tend to come out of chaos? The evidence to support Darwin's theory is so commanding that it can hardly be denied... except where the human condition is concerned. No one has yet been able to produce a credible "missing link" (unless these other human types walking the planet with us at present are the very ones for which science seeks.)

At present, can we know exactly what took place and how? No. But I do know that we can get it close enough so as to render any variance insignificant to the main point. When they arrived here they probably knew what they were looking for and that would have been the most highly evolved form of animal life on earth. We know what that would have been: The great apes. Would the apes have made it the rest of the way on their own, given hundreds of thousands or even millions of more years of evolution? I have to doubt it. Because, to be sure, we are not regarding fools here. Because the evidence of their having been here in physical form, inter-acting with human affairs from the remotest times, not to mention their constant monitoring of us to this day, all goes to suggest that their DNA input was absolutely essential to our development as humans.

Is it art imitating life or vice versa? The two well-known classic tales, "Mutiny on the Bounty" and "Island of Lost Souls", reflect an uncanny degree of what probably happened next.

Even the Bible itself states that the sons of gods took as wives the daughters of men in the days before Noah. The crew of HMS Bounty mutinied and jumped ship when they fell in love with Polynesian native women in the South Pacific. Today, on Pitcairn Island, their descendants may still be found, carrying the names of such as Fletcher Christian, etc. Except these descendants more resemble the dark natives whose blood was the more dominant, more in the preponderance, than the White Englishmen who arrived there nearly two hundred years ago.

On the Island of Lost Souls, Dr. Moreau was able to artificially speed up the process of evolution through scientific means and send jungle beasts almost immediately into a more or less "human" condition. His problem was that the creations had a bad tendency toward back-sliding, down once again toward their original nature as beasts. Moreau therefore issued to them a set of "laws" to try and help prevent such back-sliding. So very much of what is contained within the Bible consists of laws, codes of morals, admonitions, etc., all in an attempt to keep these creations here, now, from doing that very same thing: Reverting back to a primitive, animal-like state of existence.

The human brain, the mind. Two sets of instincts housed in one cranium? One forever trying to dominate the other. The God-like and the animal. There is the cerebellum, the old, animal brain which contains all of the survival instincts. Then there is the cerebrum, or the new brain, that, if there truly is such a thing, houses the soul. Is it that this cerebellum is the center for the impulses we know as "The Seven Deadly Sins" or is it only when the animal instincts take over the imaginative and creative powers of the cerebrum that the real evil jumps into being?

One more classic tale from out of literature, that of "Dr. Jekyll & Mr. Hyde" by Robert Louis Stevenson, comes to mind here. A scientist attempts to isolate and separate these two impulses within man. It destroyed him. Yet it is clear that this is what must be done, otherwise the danger will continue to exist. But the way to its accomplishment is through the most careful of upbreeding, nothing but this. And for this is called the full force of the State.

Personal choice, happenstance, etc., will never work. But, assuredly, not the present State for it only exists to serve itself.

When Paul referred to sex and marriage, he again brought in spirituality as opposed to mere lust. To merely vent one's animal lust, anything vaguely, approximately "human" will do, I suppose. But to maintain and to continue with God's original work, one must with care choose a mate with whom he can generate quality offspring, not send the race back down toward the jungle or the swamp.

The one purpose then is to breed upward, toward God. All else truly is vanity.

THERE IS YOUR CODE OF MORALS

Whatever may aid, support or otherwise facilitate this climb upward toward, or back to God is good. Whatever may hinder or divert from it is bad. Confusion and debate, any margin for serious error, etc., are all thus removed from the issue of morality or values once the origin and the purpose of it all has been correctly ascertained.

Morals, religion, ideals and so forth are one thing. The will and the organization to put teeth into these things is another. How can a country founded of, by and for Whites, with a history of so-called "racism" behind it, turn into master control central for all of the multi-racial, multi-cultural evil in the present-day world? The answer is that too much was taken for granted in the beginning.

The United States, just as every other great state throughout history, was founded by Whites amidst a condition of absolute necessity, with no room or time for the kind of shenanigans as we see today. Only a lunatic or a direct liar would have stood for the proposition of multi-racialism or multi-culturalism. It's an abstract, a "luxury". Any such individual or group in 1776 would have been placed in an insane asylum or, perhaps, even lynched.

But, over time, things relaxed, eased up, and with all of the new-found leisure time - not to mention the alien subversives who had managed to creep in once things were established and made safe by White pioneers - different "ideas", new "choices" were introduced. There now was room for foolishness. Take into account somewhat later a media and an education system having been taken over by these same aliens - plus the wealth of the nation in their pockets with which to buy and sell the politicians - and it's no mystery at all how and why such a turn of events could come to pass.

Quite naturally, even according to physics, once the top has been reached, there is no place else to go but down. That would be unless there is present a higher awareness. Of course, Whites create civilizations; Orientals may maintain civilizations; and Blacks destroy them. It is unfortunate that it has mainly been a matter of greed which has impelled our people onward to the fulfillment of the Covenant of Abraham. But it was stated that we would accomplish all of these things in spite of ourselves. Yes, it certainly was a disgrace and even a crime to crossbreed in recent times but the hard-shell reasoning as to WHY was never nailed down positively. That is what has always been taken for granted. What has been missing is a consciously Racial State.

What really could be "moral" in a multi-cultural, multi-racial conglomerate? Where is the absolute? Where is the real purpose? If this one primary fundament can be eased aside, where could it be expected to stop? As further deterioration sets in, due to the nucleus having been destroyed within the atom, then whatever other "rules" there might be are wide open to "adjustment" to better fit the worsening situation.

The word is corruption. Everyone understands the corrupt politician. Most everyone realizes that the churches are only blowing "happy smoke" in the face of a vicious and aggressive attack by Satan. I have directly asked various ministers that, if indeed Satan rules the earth, why would he permit their churches to operate openly and unmolested? Answer: Because they either pose no threat to him; Or because they are of service to his goals.

No, at the end, it is said, it will be the faithful who shall be persecuted by the Beast. Faithful to what? The truth, of course.

AWARENESS

The truth, as they say, is out there and it can more than take care of itself. The only danger is to those who are subject to it but who either choose to go against it or otherwise are ignorant of it. For it will take care of them also and extinction is usually the result of such foolishness. As far as I am concerned, extinction is one thing. The long and tortuous trail of shame and misery to get there is another.

Awareness achieved, awareness maintained, awareness acted upon. An animal in the wild, minus the fullest awareness of his instincts, doesn't survive long. Only the sharpest will go on to pass along the sharpest genes to future generations. Otherwise, the entire species may die. And a human species, a Godlike level of humanity so delicate to maintain, with everything to lose genetically, in a world full of lesser breeds, won't last long either minus a full awareness of its origins and purpose and backed up by the strength of its unity and collective will.

It has been said that everyone is a racist and I believe it. It's just that by far the most react to that in a completely inappropriate way due to generations of negative, alien media lies and conditioning on the matter. Exactly as foretold in the Bible, toward the end Satan will have, through the use of his "lying wonder" (the electronic mass media) made day look like night, bitter seem like sweet, up seem like down, right seem like wrong and friends seem like enemies, etc. So it is.

What do you have when shame is no longer shame? When disgrace is no longer disgrace? When ugliness is no longer ugliness? When wrong is no longer wrong? And when abomination is no longer abomination? Do you now have a newly "liberalized" God, one having himself become "more enlightened" by man? No. You have a society that is sick to death and, because it has reached the point where it embraces with all of its institutions this same sickness, it is a society which is damned and about to be struck down by the Lord, wholesale.

In contradiction to the cult of personality types, I say that one cannot separate the mind and the body. Human types think and act as they do according to the genes that flow in their bloodstreams. This is the very same reason that they appear the way they do and why their collective societies are as they are, i.e., White versus Third World. Colored races aside, even among Whites there are markedly different levels of development, closer or lesser kinship to God. And, even among these, there is a final distinguisher: A special, extraordinarily high level of awareness as opposed to mere "intelligence".

Since it isn't taught and, indeed is everywhere slandered, this awareness of the truth only happens by chance, in certain, rare individuals. And it is difficult to impart as well. After all, in this kind of world the truth is not only controversial, not only offensive, it is positively unprofitable and dangerous. It can get you ruined and/or killed.

But if awareness could be compared to the mind's eye, then by far most are groping about practically blind. As such, they spend their lives not much differently than any animal: Chasing matters of immediate gratification; Responding only to the "carrot & stick" motivation as wielded by their masters; With never any thought to a truly higher purpose. Of course, this blindness allows them to fall prey to endless scams and superstitions - political, economical, cultural as well as religious - which are equally blind and leading nowhere.

Again, absolutely none of this is taught anywhere and, again, it is everywhere discredited and condemned. The finest universities that Western culture has to offer all, without exception, have for the past century or so been pushing this insane and superstitious nonsense of racial equality. And once having earned that sheepskin that hangs on their wall, none are very likely to buck the trend. They assume they know it all and have in fact ceased even asking questions. And, of course, no one can tell them anything. There are your "experts".

There can be no achieving any truly safe and permanent state of Godhood minus this kind of high awareness or, call it if you will, spiritual perfection. It remains all hit or miss in the present and, in times such as these, it is only a matter of sooner or later before "the temple of the Holy Spirit" itself succumbs to genetic defilement and is brought down. And, I assure you, there is no such thing as a pure spirit in an impure vessel.

"In the beginning was the Word." There is the truth and then there are those who might be there to receive it, or to become aware of it. There must be the capacity for this awareness and there must be the desire for it. There exists diminished capacity and dulled or perverted desire. But for those with both the full capacity and the healthy desire (or instinct) to become aware of the truth, there is a simple formula:

It doesn't matter what you, I or anybody else may believe. It doesn't matter what any of us may like or dislike. It doesn't matter what any so-called "law of the land" may dictate. It doesn't matter what any of us may do or not do. And it certainly doesn't matter how we regard ourselves or others, what we may call ourselves or others. The only thing that matters is WHAT IS. "I Am That I Am". Reality = Truth = God. As far as the individual is concerned, it is a matter of knowing how to reach that.

At bottom, a certain power exists in the world which is calling all of the shots, determining all of the trends. Utilizing your powers of reason and deduction, determine what it has been and is producing, where it is leading, etc., ("Ye shall know them by their fruits.") and you'll inevitably arrive at the conclusion that it amounts to an alien dictatorship which is in control and which assumes the form of a behind-the-scenes conspiracy that has fully demonstrated that it will do as it will do, regardless of anything.

You should observe that it has its media by which it paints the universe in any colors at all which happen to suit its aim (or its own distorted perception of the universe); That it has every productive individual enslaved, with the whole wealth of the economy at its disposal with which to buy and sell everybody, high and low; That it has its police and military to go and kill any opposition it may consider as dangerous to itself and that these "automata" will do their assigned task thinking all the while, exactly as the Bible states, that they do so in the service of God himself. It has all power and it knows it. There can and shall be no "reform" of this.

Beyond that, we do live in a unique moment in history. What formerly would have required centuries to develop, we have witnessed within a single lifetime, before our very eyes. The death of a civilization and of its people. This is ancient Rome in fast-forward. With or without that power which is in control, this trend has already gone so far that, what the average middle-aged person was born into, the world of our fathers, is quite literally gone with the wind. It can't be "fixed". It can't even be flushed and done away with. With awareness, you'll realize that it is pointless to gripe about it or any of its symptoms. Paul stated that if we truly know our enemy, Satan, then nothing he can do will ever surprise us.

Awareness will tell you that it, by its very nature, cannot improve. The laws governing physics will tell you that it cannot stand still, that it cannot maintain. Hopefully you'll recognize that, as John posed, "Who can war against the Beast?" at the same time that he said, "He who lives by the sword shall die by the sword."

You must decide whether you are one more of those merely being dragged along by this inertia or whether you are able to see it for what it is. If you can see it, it is incumbent upon you to then decide whether you can, in any way, identify with it or whether it, in any way, truly represents you. Only if you can truly see it and know it can you know whether or not you are a part of it. Certainly, you are either with it or you are not, just as Christ said, "You are either with me or against me."

If you're part of it, well, then you're part of it. But if you decide you are not, shall you continue on as a reluctant slave to it? For that is one of the few calls that you are able to make. No meaningless categories or discussions - all of them within the same framework as the Beast itself. Just either, or.

Just to see and to know requires awareness and this is what the media strives to dull through the use of thrills, diversions, "choices" and generalized confusion. Which ball team do you support? Which political party? What church? Which side of the latest "issue" are you on? What is your drug of choice? What is your sexual preference? What's your "sign"? How best to pour out your energy trying to assuage the agony of a dying humanity, or, if you lean in the other direction, how best to throw more gasoline on an already out-of-control fire? How best to show to the world your "style" and your "individuality"?

There is virtually no real awareness at work anywhere on earth today. And circumstances which prevail reflect that perfectly.

It's not complex. It's elemental. You are what you are by birth. You had no choice in that, neither then nor now. And there only is what there is and you have no choice in that, either. Your only choice - providing you possess both the capacity and the desire - is to cultivate the awareness to know what you are, that which actually is, and then to determine your relationship to it.

You must come to know the nature of the Satanic system that dominates just as you must come to know your own nature. Neither one can be changed. But they can die. It's all a matter of being asleep or awake as far as you are concerned because, I assure you, the system itself is awake enough to know exactly what it wants. Only through awareness can you decide whether you are in agreement with the system's agenda for the future or whether you have merely been asleep to this point, exactly as the system itself has lulled you. Then you can ask yourself why any system would want to deny you any sense of truth or reality.

In any circumstance, it will always come down to what you were born as and your level of awareness to that together with the rest. Should awareness go - or fail to ever be present - so too will the organism designed to house it soon follow. Then you have been crossed out of the equation permanently and there only remains the alien system.

If there is a purpose to the alien, Satanic system, other than to enrich itself and multiply its power, it can only be to guide an increasing condition of confusion into a permanent one, a genetic one, without hope of salvation or redemption. This, of course, would correspond directly to Satan's own purpose: To defeat God's purpose by destroying his highest work. To create a condition from which there can be no waking up, ever. This final goal entails altering what future generations are born as. This so that their own very inner nature will be as confused and distorted as the system itself.

The place where this has already happened is commonly known, again, as the Third World. A place of endless misery, of hopelessness. Literally hell on earth.

The means to the accomplishment of such a goal is the lie. The lie is the enemy of all awareness, of all truth. Who or what would feel the need to deliberately wield the weapon of the lie in order to achieve its aim? It couldn't be anything other than Satan himself. You must know and hate the system because it represents lies for truth. It makes hell appear to be heaven. How else would John be able to say that, "they worshipped the Beast"?

Genuine awareness will tell you that, even as we ourselves are subject to only WHAT IS in this universe, the system of evil, too, is finally, ultimately subject to the same laws and that those laws are represented by truth in its purest form. You'll see all around you that the system of evil is even now collapsing of its own impossibility. "Satan is full of wrath as he senses that his time is short."

If you can know what a lie is, then you can know what the truth is. And if you can know that the lie is representative of Satan, you can also know that the truth is representative of God.

All of it comes down to where you will be found at the climax. Will you have been claimed as just one more victim of the lie - as will have been the majority of all others - or will you go on to make up part of a future?

THE CASE FOR LEADERSHIP

For me it has always been too easy to write off those persons whose awareness falls short of that which I've been discussing. I've discovered, however, that over the years and the decades, as my own few respected teachers die and as my own awareness has increased, it has had the effect of placing me out on a distant island. I don't feel there is much to be done in these times except, as John advised, to wait and to hang on to what one has. I find that either no one is listening or else they haven't got the capacity to hear. Nonetheless, I write these words.

But from the Bible comes the comparison with the sheep, the flock and the shepherd. In any such experiment, is it reasonable to expect all that are involved to stand at the same level? And right there is the case for leadership.

The only time when personality should properly enter the picture is when, at those rare occasions, the best genetically comes together with the best mentally and, perhaps even, "spiritually" insofar as that indicates a higher awareness of God. This combination is the essence of natural leadership. The enemy certainly knows this. "Take out the shepherd and scatter the flock."

Always starting on the basis of good race, this awareness of complete truth and reality, and, in connection with that, of man's genuine purpose, places the individual on as close as it comes to a different level of existence when compared to the teeming masses who live without it. This kind of person can't be fooled or duped. He can't and won't waste precious time, energy, words or life.

The proper relationship between these leaders and the wide masses? Just this: To insure the broadest possible base of good White genes to allow Darwin's theory of natural selection to work. A nation is only as good as its gene pool, or as good as its yeomanry, i.e., the common masses. Out of these masses will spring the geniuses if the breeding is kept right. The Third World is damned for eternity because you can't get something from out of nothing.

You may forget the billions upon billions who clearly are not White. Consider instead only those millions who are nominally "White" and I place it in those terms because they are only so through the relative "racism" of their ancestors or due to the no-choice geographic isolation of those ancestors. These people may claim no credit for what they are. And, worse than that, in the present they are doing nothing to insure that there will be a better, Whiter future.

The above sad scenario is due primarily to there being no kind of White leadership. (And please do not point to deluded, White sell-outs occupying positions of power.) There is no direction, again, no purpose. There is no national consciousness, no national will. There are only lies and diversions together with more than enough alien blood present to spell a thousand dooms. Left alone this would mean eventual and ultimate erasure as a species and would mean a world, as one great observer commented, spinning back into its ether, devoid of higher creation.

The fools, criminals and lunatics envision only one kind of world. A world without "racism". That can only be a world without races. Specifically, without the White race as everything will have gone brown. One, big Third World. Visualize the present Third World as a hospital patient existing solely by artificial life support, with the doctors and the nurses represented only by Whites. The Whites all finally disappear and then what?

Some have very definite notions as to the desirability of existence on artificial life support. I am among them. Let there be quality of life or let there be no life. The Bible alluded to a time close to the end when "men will seek death but it will elude them." That's pretty clear to me. Artificial life support, a condition of perpetual hopelessness. That is the state of all Third World societies. The merciful thing to do is pull the plug. The thing not to do is allow a situation like that to threaten those who do possess real hope. Do not let the lifeboat designed for a dozen to be swamped by a hundred.

The best. Breed for the best. This calls for leadership only by the best.

Today there is no leadership, only "caretakership" and I hasten to add that these caretakers have as their task to see to it that the slide into hell of the best of humanity is kept absolutely smooth and on track, according to the plan of the destroyers who are determining the course from behind the scenes.

Briefly, touching upon the topic of conspiracy, which is what rules the world today, it would seem that mere high intelligence minus that critical connection with God and his one reality and purpose, amounts directly to the kind of mediocrity - spiritually - that is shared in all areas of government, everywhere. Only the presence of White genes and what they can produce and maintain continues to make the difference, and that difference is what is under attack: These "mud" types hate and resent Whites for being what they are (and for showing up the mud types as being what they are.) Just as in the days of the Bible, lawyers and businessmen - money men - are in charge. That would have to change.

From straight out of the Old Testament, when statecraft and politics are guided by these types, then all "official policy" comes down to these three things: Hypocrisy; Iniquity; and Folly. And, once more, the glaring results of this are all around us. Be assured, once any state and its institutions are thus infected and compromised, they are DEAD.

Seemingly the "best". Certainly that according to their own standard of measurement: Money. Still, you may know them by their fruits. Remember that animal intelligence is perfect because it is 100% in tune with nature. There are species of human kind that also are 100% in tune with nature, i.e., they display no development. But the highest form of man has a destiny which was given to him by God. Remember that human intelligence is flawed because it combines the animal and the Godlike. It comes down to each individual being his own biological experiment to see how markedly these Godlike traits display themselves. By far, the most fall short. Cunning passes for "intelligence".

Leadership has as its function to take this in hand and control and guide it, exactly like the laboratory experiment that it is, to guarantee and to speed up the results intended by God, not leaving it as a matter of chance, much less in the hands of those who are sworn to ruin and destroy it.

Every genetic, physiological and psychological - or spiritual - defect has to be culled out. The way to this is eugenics, or healthy breeding. And the mind, the state of the soul, being the most highly evolved and, thereby, the most delicate and vulnerable of all, stands as the chief goal. It is the very threshold of God himself. How many types commonly seen around us in the present - and I am speaking of Whites here - aren't even aware of what it is they're doing at the moment? So many things are to go wrong with the mind. I have to believe that these various psychiatric conditions represent the very "spirits" and "devils" that Christ, by the power of his own personality, was able to drive out.

Today, of course, it is Jewish "psychiatry". The use of drugs, etc. This translates in Biblical terms to sorcery. Force an alien culture and value system upon a people and what can you expect but psychological and social problems? But, as I'm quite sure they understand, until a people can be effectively polluted and wiped out genetically, the next best thing to do is keep them zombieized and perfectly docile with drugs while they await the slaughter. (Even the Blacks well know that the massive drug traffic in this country is government controlled.)

THIRD AND FOURTH RATE

All governments are oligarchies regardless how they may choose to define or present themselves. This simply means control in the hands of a few. Regardless of name or stated aim, the differences are struck in but two areas: Who exactly is it that comprises that select minority in control; And is their regime truly representative of the best interests of the nation? In the case of the present-day United States (as with each and every White nation on earth) the answers are: First, Jews and their lackeys; And, second, a flat "no".

The kind of so-called "leaders" these people in these nations have grown accustomed to over the past century or so have been and are rank errand boys of the third and fourth water. These people are not allowed to see and know their real rulers, only the yes-men. It is these stooges for which they are allowed to vote, never the actual powers. And an oligarchy amounts to a group dictatorship. It may or may not have a face. In more recent times the Hidden Hand has come to realize that it's better not to be easily identifiable. But the real power is not going to, never has and never will, leave its power up to chance.

The top errand boy may be a backwater baboon who happens to possess an "IQ" and may have been shuffled off to an English university. Or he may be the scion of a wealthy family which has been dabbling in politics for some decades but who nonetheless reflects mediocrity personified. It only gets worse from there. Mere "IQ" and coming from wealth are no qualifiers for true leadership. We've all experienced the "smart" jerk and the "rich" imbecile. But they can be and are useful to the entrenched enemy occupiers as toadies within their puppet, collaborationist government.

Each of these may be the designated out-front man for the respective two "parties" which are the twin pedestals of the seemingly eternal shell-game of the Jews foisted off onto the public as "democracy". These so-called "parties" are equally vapid and meaningless as are the front men themselves. Their "platforms" deal in trivialities while the nation itself languishes and dies.

I say third and fourth rate because this kind of individual has been found everywhere, at all times, in what loosely could be referred to as "civil service". They are "qualified" to carry out assigned tasks, that's all. Rudyard Kipling had much to say about them in his poem, "A Servant When He Reigneth". Sometimes these types do get the idea that they are the boss, however. Usually when that happens they end up either like a Kennedy or a Nixon. Never doubt, it is the Jews who are in control.

Democracy defines as mediocrity. So does communism. Enforced mediocrity. Tear down excellence in order to pour it out off the masses who can never amount to anything except in the service of excellence, or, better put, under the guidance of their own, natural leadership. We're not regarding leadership here at all but, rather, management. And these types are born and bred to be good managers. But that is their limit and it is not management that the situation calls for but leadership. They are very skillfully managing our racial and national descent into hell. The "leaders", at least those actually deciding the course and calling the shots, are behind the scenes, unknown, cannot be called into question or "changed". They are alien to our blood just as they are hostile to our blood. And it is they who issue the orders to these third and fourth rate stock boys.

Stock boys, yes, because they don't have either the capacity or the desire to grasp the big picture, of what it's all really about, the higher purpose. They are mere civil servants. This is the very essence of how these miserable, detestable governments of enemy occupation, both East and West, have been working for the past century. The use of front men, the use of imagery.

It would seem natural, then, that truth and reality would demand the real leader or the real party, not to mention the real philosophy, to be 100% out front exactly as the concept of leadership is supposed to be. This is precisely the way it was in the Third Reich in Germany. There were no secret wire-pullers behind the scenes. All those types had very wisely left the country ahead of Hitler's becoming chancellor. The fog was thus parted, the veil lifted. Complete authority balanced with complete responsibility. The Biblical concept of the bride and the groom as applied to the wedding of the people and the leadership. And with no room for any "open marriage".

There were, to be sure, the third and fourth raters within even the Third Reich. There had to be just in order to keep the cog wheels of government turning. The great visionaries and philosophers, etc., cannot, should not, be expected to shuffle papers or "crunch numbers", etc. But such as these were the late-comers to the Party, the opportunists like Albert Speer who could feel the way the wind was blowing and who could see which side the bread was buttered on. They also were the "nicht Nazis" at the end of the war who'd say or do anything, again, to save their own miserable asses.

Human nature is a very unpretty thing as this work has begun to delve into. Society and leadership do amount to pyramids with the controlling few comprising the very top-most point and with the rest, growing ever more common and mediocre, spreading out across the bottom-most reaches. And, once more, the proper role for that tiny elite in control at the top? Not to fleece and "harvest" the masses below them, much less to use their control to mix and mongrelize those masses into some damnable, irredeemable genetic cesspool. No. It is to take the nature and the purpose of God's original experiment directly, consciously in hand and to guide it with every scientific means at our disposal to the quickest fruition: The upbreeding of the race.

HATE & PREJUDICE

It is imagined that one must "hate" in order to recognize and to practice eugenics or even to merely wish to keep to one's own. To go further, unless one is satisfied at only attempting to practice personal cleanliness in the midst of a society that amounts to a cultural and genetic "septic tank", one would really have to be a dangerous "hater" if he is determined to get to the main shut-off valve before he and his whole kind are literally drowned in a roaring torrent of excrement. And in line with this, does it automatically mean that one must "hate" excrement merely in order to be willing and able to deal with it appropriately?

But what of those (and there are such) who do actually "love" excrement? What if they managed to get their hands on the media and on political power? By virtue of their own, peculiar bent, they might be expected to relegate the normal, healthy response into a crime. A "hate crime"? What about those who have as part of their agenda miscegenation, or race-mixing? Whether sick or criminal or both, that is the element which is in power in the world today. And don't things reflect it?

The term prejudice implies pre-judging someone or something without really knowing anything about them or it. While any such stance may be stupid and ridiculous, it should not be criminalized. The word here should actually be discriminate. And it has been observed that free men may discriminate while slaves cannot. To criminalize discrimination, especially on the basis of race, color and creed, is perhaps the major plank in the Marxist, communist platform.

Remember, these types actually believe they can remold the universe after their own, insane theories through the use of popular brainwash, ridiculous and impossible laws, plus all the force of the State to MAKE it happen. I don't care what they may call themselves - Kennedy or Clinton liberals, etc. - it works out to Marxism. And they cannot and will not tolerate any opposition whatsoever.

They insist upon universal, racial equality while all of the evidence points in the opposite direction. That makes of the equality theory either a superstition or a lie or both. If this were some kind of a "Miss Congeniality" contest, then it would be fine. But it is not and never has been. It is the very breeding - and performance - experiment that I outlined earlier. Man is part of nature and, within nature, there is no equality anywhere. Once more, this imagined, idealized and enforced "equality" is Marxism in its purest element. Enthroned insanity or masked criminality? Take your pick.

As a young person at home, I used to raise various breeds of dogs. My mother loved her "mutts" which she kept as pets, and so did I, actually. And I learned positively that dogs have every bit their own distinct personalities as human beings like to pride themselves on. Each of the mutts had their own very lovable distinctions in this way, to be sure. I found all of this so very fascinating to study, not much different than Pavlov, I suppose. However, one thing I never lost sight of was the care that had to be maintained to safeguard the integrity of the pure-breeds that I was raising, that indeed was the purpose of the whole exercise. Whether at the time I might be raising Dobermans or pit bulls or beagles, that care should not be taken to keep these specimens "segregated" - literally - from the mutts would have begun right away to result in a mess. My mother, on the other hand, being so kind-hearted and sentimental, would have given way to the very mess I alluded to, going strictly on the basis of personality.

(Also, as disturbing as some may take it, never forget for an instant that, to those dogs, it is WE who are "God".)

What are dogs, again, other than domesticated wolves? Wolves won't crossbreed when left on their own but dogs are notorious for crossbreeding if given the chance. And the euthanasia mills of the humane societies everywhere grind non-stop in an attempt to cope with the unfortunate offspring lest they completely overrun the land and generate a tidal wave of misery, starvation and disease in their turn. An animal version of the Third World? The tragic part? Most if not all of these poor specimens might make fine, loving pets by virtue of their personalities... IF that were the issue. But it isn't. The issue has always been a question of quality over quantity.

There obviously is something in this domestication process that affects the instincts. A major flaw in the plan. And what, once more, is man other than a domesticated ape? The identical same rules apply. What do you think the Flood of Noah was about? What do you suppose the coming great cleansing by fire will be about? What we do with curs and mongrels of the canine variety today, whoever it was that domesticated us will again undertake in the not-so-distant future exactly as he did some twelve thousand years ago. Once more, the tragedy? A lot of otherwise good people will get it right along with the rest. But it will be for the salvation of the greater experiment, not for the sake of any number of personalities.

Marxism and democracy are first cousins. Indeed, the former could never exist without the latter. Both philosophies support the idea of mediocrity over excellence, they champion the lowest common denominator. It's only that Marxism is a little more forthright, more militant about it. The Marxists will get you to that "Utopia" of theirs much faster than will the democrats. (But such haste in these areas can and has in the past resulted in social backlashes that have nearly wrecked the entire, world scheme.) Democracy amounting to what I have called "managed confusion" with Marxism amounting to the naked tyranny of the lie. But they both must brand their opposition as "haters".

You don't have to "know" the individual or the group in order to be well aware that he or they are not of your own kind. It is not necessary to hate them. Perhaps it might be necessary to hate any dogma, especially any aggressive, militant dogma, which would force it to be any other way upon you. Because enforced equality flies directly in the face of evolution. And evolution, being part of nature itself, is part of God's own plan. Therefore, both Marxism and democracy expose themselves as being anti-God, or, if you will, anti-Christ.

There will be matters raised such as freedom and liberty. These will be invoked anytime the stringent measures needed to reverse the slide into hell are brought up. And, most often, they'll be invoked by the Marxists themselves. Here you have the ultimate example of what real hypocrisy is about. But the hand that wields the hoe in the garden doesn't consider the "rights" of the weeds to choke out the valuable vegetables or flowers just because they can by virtue of their speed and numbers. There is no "democracy" in gardening. One cuts out the weeds or he loses the garden. (Unless one happens to be "pro-weed".)

Hypocrisy, indeed. Under this present-day "democracy", how much true freedom do you really enjoy? Try now having the fellowship of an all-White club. Try going anywhere that is all-White. Or running a business with only those whom you wish to employ, etc. What is freedom, anyway? What about the freedom to be White and to remain White? How about freedom from alien contamination and exploitation, whether economic, cultural or racial? Freedom from filth and confusion. More than mere thoughts of personal "freedom", the sure knowledge that you'll have the ability to build your family in the way God intended and to know that your grandchildren will be secure to do the same, according to God's great purpose, with no interference from any quarter whatsoever.

The kind of "freedom" these liars here really mean is the kind which permits you to be "free" to pursue all manner of foolishness, to indulge limitless vice and escape, to spend your existence in meaninglessness and self-delusion, all of it leading up to destruction. More important even than that, however, is that the predators among you are "free" to continue to dupe you to the slaughter.

To correct such a situation would require a cadre of those who don't care about semantics but who have their eye on the ball. Nowadays they might call it "tough love". It would require those who are about life and death, not about money. And finally, there's nothing wrong with hate or anything else for that matter... Only that it be well-directed.

WHO WROTE THE BIBLE?

The ignorant and the arrogant like to insist that the Bible is just "one more book", that it is "invalid" because it was written by the hand of men, not God. Of course, it is the word of men but those men who are fully in tune with God. But it's more than that even. How would the men of two-to-three thousand years ago have known all about the most distant origins as well as the course of the remainder of the future? (Don't say that the latter was loose guesswork, open to endless interpretation, because what was then prophesy is now 98% or 99% accomplished fact.)

Even contemporary scholars agree that by far most of the Bible was written by those in prison or in exile, but certainly those not in favor with the Powers That Were. Only in the rarest of instances was any contribution made on the part of those who were in current positions of influence or control, such as David and Solomon. But even such as those were recorded at the time as committing the very sort of crimes which would ultimately lead to the death of the state they were in charge of.

The Books of Kings could directly be compared to a list of U.S. Presidents, for example, with the smallest handful having been good and useful men while the majority were either ineffectual or outright damaging to the nation they were sworn to serve.

But who would have recorded it that way? A most recent television run-down of all the U.S. Presidents in cameo wound up, in each instance, with all of them having done "a good job". Yet things remain the way they are. Only the continuance of a certain, shared off-balance mindset could allow for something like that. For only those who share in that delusional fantasy are permitted to come anywhere close to politics, media or professions of any kind. So it was then. So it always is when a society begins to die.

I think back over all the long decades of our poor, struggling

Rightist groups which not only condemned the policies which were at work in the nation but which went so far as to predict what the outcomes of these same policies would be if they were allowed to go on. We were laughed at when we were not being ignored. And the passage of time has proved us to have been right. Still they laugh but mostly they ignore.

They live in another realm entirely. One removed from reality. And, in order for them to maintain their realm of fantasy, they can only see things in a certain, skewed fashion. Obviously, they value this fantasy more than reality. They choose the form ahead of the function. To them, it's the theory that counts, not the results that it brings.

The Bible, then, was written by outcastes. Most of the great prophets and apostles were hunted down and brutally murdered, as was Christ himself. Again, those who did this were certain in their own minds that they were acting in service to the Lord. Yet the words of the martyrs lived. Their words survived after the hollow balloon of that day's statecraft, all the official hypocrisy, iniquity and folly, blew away with the inevitable collapse of the State itself, under their charge.

And, for a time, certainly long enough, a sufficient number of the uncontaminated people, now freed from under institutionalized insanity and criminality, could take up their words and go forward into a new future. So it was with the death of the Classical world and the birth of Western, Christian civilization. That was, of course, until most recent times. We now stand at the end of that cycle.

People, stupid as they are, can't see the parallel between then and now. It has come full circle again. It is again all form and no function. The words of the great writers of the Bible, in decrying the abysmal shame plus the impending disaster of that time and place, really didn't seem to fit the situation as it stood in the United States at mid-twentieth century. At least not outwardly. But they have since come to fit the rapidly changing situation perfectly.

As a very young person, I rejected the Church because what they were teaching appeared to have no relevance in terms of, again, these prophets, the parables of Christ, etc. Once more, that changed. What did not change was the emptiness in the minds and the hearts of those "Bible thumpers" who were only parroting words and lines which they themselves didn't even understand. The meaning was lost when the context changed. But, with the return of the context some two thousand years later, the people failed to grasp the renewed meaning.

CONSPIRACY

"When all its work is done the lie shall rot;
The truth is great and shall prevail,
When none cares whether it prevails or not."

What would be the actual purpose of the lie? It must be to hamper or otherwise derail your awareness so that you can't decide or act appropriately or in a timely manner to circumstances. We all are familiar with the evidence to landmark events or crimes that has been sealed until well after the deaths of any who were alive at the time. Too late to do anything about it, in other words. Only the damage remains. But that effect suits the conspirators just fine.¹⁵

The dictionary defines conspiracy as, "to plan secretly an unlawful act." Lawful or otherwise, our concern is whether or not State policy is in the interests of the White people who created America and made it great. Clearly, nowhere is this the case today and for a long time past. How could such a thing be minus conspiracy? They "voted" themselves into this mess through trickery, deception and the wholesale use of political sell-outs, stooges and hacks. Do you imagine they'll ever be able to "vote" themselves out of it with the same master-manipulators still at the helm?

Scholarly works on the conspiracy abound (if you are hooked up to the right underground sources.) But anyone not aware that conspiracy controls all and has been doing so for more than the past century - and, of course, that represents 99.9% of everybody - only goes to validate the cynicism and the confidence that the conspirators themselves showed back in the latter part of the nineteenth century when they were putting their plan into high gear with the meeting which produced the infamous "Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion" in 1897.

The sensationalistic and apparently "extremist" exposes from that time until this might have been blown off - and indeed were and still are - as the work of liars and forgers. But it remains even as Henry Ford, Sr., pointed out in the 1920s that, even if some of these captured documents were forgeries, or plagiarisms, as world Jewry insists that they are, the next question would have to be: Why are these self-same people carrying out all of the tenets contained within them as though they were a blueprint? And, indeed, a forgery of what?

The conspiracy and its lies has led us to what? It is responsible for the United States having been transformed during the course of the twentieth century from the New Promised Land; the Thirteenth Tribe - Manasseh - and into the New Babylon, the Second Beast of the Apocalypse. A cancerous tumor, rotten to the core but as yet economically and militarily irresistible throughout the world. Exactly as the Moslems put it, the very seat of Satan.

Today, of course, literally everything boasted about openly in 1897 has become reality. And still the public at large hasn't caught on. A strange phenomenon was taking place in literature about the same time, however, and that was the release of Bram Stoker's novel, "Dracula". There can be little doubt that the classic tale of the vampire is but an allegory of the conspirators and their plot. "The strength of the vampire is that no one believes in him."

How the vampire recoils at the sign of the cross! Up until 1948, he was a stateless being who, like the fictional vampire, carried the soil of his grave around with him in a coffin. Inseparably associated with vermin and filth, accompanied by rats, bats, etc., his real-life counterparts have ever held as their domain all that is degrading from narcotics to pornography, from prostitution to White slavery and beyond.

His object: To escape from the East and invade the West. His modus operandi: The use of deception, allowing him to pass among his intended victims until he has been able to cinch the deal through the mingling of his blood with theirs. Through his early buying up of all media, he has been able to thoroughly fool and confuse the human mind and through his control of the money plus the pleasure it can bring, he has been entirely able to overwhelm all human willpower.

But he casts no reflection in a mirror. The imperfect and fallible human intelligence is no match for him but the simple power of "I Am That I Am" - of the sheer physics contained in a looking glass - he cannot fool.

The vampire is a lie just as is his real-life inspiration. Not even an original race, "Jews" only appear better than halfway through the Old Testament, in Second Kings, 16:6. This was after enough of the White men of original Hebrew, Israelite stock had taken wives from among the dark, Canaanite natives of the first Promised Land and had produced bastard offspring who eventually took over the Hebrew Temple, the workings of the State itself and were the two-thirds majority in population by the time of Christ. The sins of the fathers, indeed!

They hate Whites and they especially hate Christ for this reason: With the advent of Christ, the racial truth was reintroduced into what had been the belief system of the old Hebrew Temple; Remaining Whites who were genetically worthy or capable of "salvation" or "redemption" flocked to the new doctrine in droves; Finally they quit their old neighborhood which they had allowed to "go dark" and left for Europe en masse, leaving the former Jewish overlords alone, high and dry, in a ruined, worthless place. It was because of this that they murdered Christ.

They do still hate Christ because they, at least, are aware of this even if the average "Christian", or White, today is not. But they casually permit these "Christian" churches to flourish because they also know that their doctrine has long since become the same stale superstition as the former Hebrew Temple had become in their hands. Indeed, it is today referred to as "Judeo-Christianity".

The vampire cannot exist on his own. He must have a constantly available source of fresh blood on which to feed. He is a dead lie and can produce nothing on his own. When the last Whites left Palestine and the Mid-East, the Jew was left flat and cold. Jews do not infiltrate and take over colored, Third World nations because there is not the spark of life and vitality present which they crave and demand.

Eventually, Jews followed Whites into Europe and, after establishing their own ghettos for themselves, became the very speculators, usurers and parasites that they are again today. Those times for us marked the Dark Ages. When the newly united, newly awakened Christian kingdoms of Europe drove out the Jews to the East, it was the dawn of the Renaissance.

But for those who know how to read and comprehend the Bible, it will be known that what we today call the Dark Ages was also the time of the Four Horsemen, not some future date. And what began with the Renaissance, that is, from about 945 AD to 1945 AD, was the Thousand Years of Christ, again, not far away in some future time. That marked a fantastic period for Whites who were on their way up in every area, from art to science, medicine to literature, nation-building, exploration, world-conquering, expanding their numbers, etc. Everything in accordance with the Covenant of Abraham.

And Jews mainly remained out of our midst, confined to the East, Satan imprisoned in the Bottomless Pit. Of course, he had escaped his prison even before the twentieth century but it was during the twentieth century that he worked his damage in overturning the established White, Christian order of things through wars and through revolutions, etc.

The Thousand Years will be ended, the Bible says, and then will start Satan's Little Season. At the time of this writing, well into the twenty-first century, we are already sixty years along into that "Little Season". It is a time when Satan rules the world unopposed. And doesn't the state of the world reflect that?

He accomplished this through conspiracy. Keeping his own agenda firmly in mind at all times, he covered himself with beautiful promises of Utopia here on earth and presented all sorts of enlightened "choices" for people to make, each one geared to the further overthrow of the Christian form of natural hierarchy within which the Jew couldn't function effectively. Managed confusion, "democracy". And he has succeeded absolutely.

What if this kind of awareness were to be commonly held? Can you imagine the changed lives? The changed world? About a hundred years after the "Protocols" were penned, I came to recognize this high state of awareness as being literally what was meant by the Holy Spirit. The state of mind which can't be fooled.

CONFOUNDED

Even as Christ told them, they may seem shrewd and even brilliant in their grasp of the letter of the law but they completely miss the guiding spirit, the underlying purpose of the law. The dark genes which they carry in their blood makes them this way. They can do nothing about it. For this reason then, we cannot have them in our midst much less in positions of power and influence over us.

Can the vampire see himself for what he is? To the extent that he hides his real purpose knowingly and deals in lies and deceit to accomplish his goals, yes. To the extent that he is convinced that it is given to him by the Creator to prey upon the rest of the peoples of the planet, to suck up all life and wealth, no. Exactly as the Creator himself said, he has permitted this World Enemy "powerful delusion".

Of course, should the very final victim die, the vampire himself must soon perish. The hand that clutches the cookies in the jar can't be withdrawn... that is without letting go of the cookies and this it refuses to do. And certainly, if holding 100% of all the power isn't sufficient to affect one's own idea of "Utopia", then one may be sure that the whole effort has been foredoomed from the start. Rather like the Midas Touch, except in reverse. In this case, everything he touches turns to crap.

What then also of every single human effort to date which has attempted to overturn this Satanic influence or at least to effectively warn the people of it? Failure. Miserable failure resounding ever fainter while the number of those in awareness continues to dwindle. Hard reasons for this? One, the "best", i.e., most talented, of our people are either sharing Satan's delusion with him, are simply within his pay or are to be counted among the inertia who merely go with the flow at any time. Two, the indelible image that Satan has attached to any cause or individual who opposes him (or, better put, opposes his beautiful and magnificent, shining promises) through the use of his "lying wonder", the mass media, carries the kind of connotation that would mainly attract only such types as carry their own crippling deficiencies.

The perfect set-up? Satan obviously thinks so. But if he could really see his game, would he play it? If he realized that it was he who was destined for the lake of fire, would he pursue his course? The question is moot. It has all already taken place and can't be changed.

I could devote a book much larger than this to a litany of many more perfectly sound and logical, documentable "reasons" for why things are the way they are and why they can't ever seem to be "fixed". Others, more scholarly than I, have already done this over and over and it is all there to be read and studied (if, again, you have access to the underground press.)

But, once you have all this as I have, then it is better put to just say that God declared for it to be so and, furthermore, that it would only last the time he allotted to it. Once again, the only logical way to look at this, then, is to conclude that it must have already taken place, somewhere, sometime in a parallel universe and that these same space colonizers - this "Alpha and Omega" - were there on hand to witness it. But then they cared enough to bring the story of it back to us, here and now, who are literally reliving it. How few grasp that?

END GAME

"Before 1945 we were a party. Since 1945 we have been a religion." So commented one National Socialist veteran of the earth-shaking transition of that tumultuous and pivotal year.

Everyone has heard over and over again about men who have supposedly changed history. But if you believe the Bible and especially what's contained in the Book of Revelation, you'll know already that there has never been any such thing as a man who has changed history. For, if the book is right, it has always had but one ending. The ending has been the same since the beginning. Those who find distasteful the description of it and who preach that, should we mend our ways now, we might possibly avert all the disaster, would also have to believe that what has already been written can be invalidated.

This is no more possible than hoping for the dried ink configurations already down on paper to magically change themselves to read otherwise. Plus, invariably I've found that, by "mending", these types really mean to go even more liberal than they already are. They like to go swimming but they hate to get wet. They've bought the ticket but they don't want to take the trip. They don't want the association between their actions and the logical result.

There have been, however, extraordinary men who have come along in order to keep history right on track. The greatest of these have been Jesus of Nazareth and Adolf Hitler. One cannot make such a statement, so broad and sweeping, so radical as that without adding some qualifications. For it has been precisely the lack of hard qualifications which has not only allowed for the image of Christ and indeed the whole Christian Church to dilute and become nothing but to have allowed for naked lies and slander to have separated the White race from its greatest hero in modern times: Adolf Hitler.

Riding down a busy city thoroughfare recently, bored and stuck in traffic, I couldn't help noticing some of the idiotic bumper stickers around me. Then it hit me: One of the Ten Commandments is not to take the name of the Lord in vain. For a long time I've held that merely exclaiming "God damn!" is not taking the Lord's name in vain because "God" isn't a name. What does the dictionary say? "Idle, worthless, futile, no real value, unsuccessful." It is this context one isn't supposed to involve his name in. Well then, all of these religious bumper stickers touting "Jesus, Jesus, Jesus", or "Honk If You Love Jesus", etc., and not knowing the first thing of what he was about really are classic examples of literally taking the Lord's name in vain. A parrot could do as much.

And Hitler... Easily the most lied about, slandered, hated and misunderstood man of all time. Well, the Bible did say that you can't be a friend of God and of the world at the same time. The Beast is in place and who is it that he hates the most? For the astute and the honest, that should say it all. Following Christ in his day could get you killed. "And no man spake openly of him for fear of the Jews." But he said at the time that any who were found to be ashamed of him, he too would be ashamed of. As I said, his Church has been watered down to where no one gives a damn any longer and so it means nothing. Not the case with Hitler and his cause, however. To openly associate yourself with Hitler... Well, you get the idea.

My point is not to merely associate yourself with someone or something that is guaranteed to make a splash or get a strong reaction. No. Not for the "hell" of it. Never consideration to form but only to function. Wherever the truth is ALIVE. Alliance with the truth. And everything must be its own reward. The truth for its own sake and for the sake of one's own salvation. No other reason. No matter what the cost. The First Beast killed Christ. The Second Beast killed Hitler. All for the same reasons.

If you were to ask a contemporary Judeo-Christian, "Why is Jesus the Christ?", you might get an answer something like this: "Because he died for our sins." But don't stop there, go on to ask them, "What sins, exactly?" At that point they'll begin having trouble. And how about the countless generations that were before him, that couldn't have "believed in him"? Are they all damned? It can get pretty silly. If you merely "believe in him", that's supposed to get you "in like Flynn". You already know what I've said about "belief". Let's have understanding instead. If you don't fully know what he was about, then it doesn't mean a thing.

Jesus was the man on the spot, in the right place, at the right time, in order to keep history on track. And what is history but the development and the destiny of the White race? For no other races have development or destiny.

Ancient Israel, the Promised Land, had already, in effect, died. The Classical world which it had given birth to - ancient Greece and Rome - had already hit its zenith, had turned rotten, and was headed toward death due, again, to multi-culturalism and multi-racialism. Europe was an unsettled wilderness. North America was unknown. The truth, which had resided with the Hebrew Temple, after the last Whites had escaped from dying, rotten Egypt, was now in the hands of "Jews" - the bastard offspring of wayward Israelites and dark, Canaanite "converts" - and had become just another superstition the way Judeo-Christianity has become. The White race might have died right there. Minus the unifying effect of the early Christian Church during the Middle Ages, who can doubt that we would have been swept away by the armed invasions of the likes of Moors, Turks, Mongols, Huns, etc.?

It required a thousand years after the death of Christ before his own Thousand Years could be established. It required that long for Whites to get themselves into Europe, get their states organized, get their Christian kingdoms established, to get up on their feet and to fully exert Western Christian Civilization not only in Europe but North America and the entire world, wherever the White man set his foot.

But it always dated from the time of his birth. He basically said it himself when he said, "This generation shall not pass before all these things be realized." He was the father of Western Civilization. He gave birth to the last great phase of this drama for Whites here on earth. He literally "saved" us then in order that we might make it until now. Sins? The "sins of the fathers"? How about all those racial Jews having been produced through lust, who were at his time and still are now running the show, responsible for all this mess, who murdered him?

Sins? What is sin but error? The same sins as always that destroy peoples and cultures: Multi-culturalism and multi-racialism. Nowadays, they indulge in these same abominations AND DO SO IN HIS NAME! Truly the damned!

After it had become clear to me that Christ's Thousand Years were well past, I was forced to look back upon that well-recorded history and reflect upon how bloody, violent, how less than ideal, less than "heavenly" it all was. But, as I stressed from the beginning here, it is, after all, a breeding experiment and not some game of "pretendzies" for "do-gooders", or how best we can try to deny our animal origins and the fact that we are fully subject to the laws of nature. Life is not only the nation, it is struggle. It was Hitler who said both of these. When struggle ceases, so does life. So the nation dies. It's easy, even "fun", to slide down the slippery slide into hell. It's hard and difficult, however, to climb UP that ladder. But climb we must. So much for unreal "idealism".

If it isn't a breeding experiment, if it isn't a DNA colonization as I claim it is, then it is all nonsense, all accident, and it doesn't matter what kind of crap anyone believes for it is all about nothing. But I go according to the evidence and I rely upon the scientific method of weighing that evidence. That much said, no one will deny that it was Hitler who brought about history's first consciously organized RACIAL STATE, the Third Reich in Germany. "God's will be done on earth as it is in heaven." (Or is that all blurb and buzz-word too?)

In order to accomplish this, Hitler and Germany were required to physically overthrow and throw out Satan - in the body of the Jews - from off their throats, from out of their midst, and to go on to act in accordance with the word and the will of God in the modern era. Satan, still enthroned in the rest of the world, was enraged and even fearful that this might catch on elsewhere in the White world and so he used his money power, his media power, etc., to induce the rest of the world to go and destroy Germany and erase what Hitler had accomplished, exactly as he had induced the Romans to kill Christ on some false pretext.

Hitler was asked in 1923 if he were the returned Christ. He answered in the negative but did say that he was the next-to-the-last, come to do the preparatory work for that last one which would be Christ returned. Asked again in 1945, only hours before his death, by some of his faithful as to whom they should fight for now, Hitler responded by saying, "For the coming man."

Hitler set up a working model of God's own State here on earth. Nothing short of a miracle. In his final address to the German nation, on January 30th, 1945, he said that the successful completion of that act, that is, the taking of political power in 1933, was the positive guarantee of final, ultimate victory. Jesus, hours before his own death, told his apostles that they surely would experience tribulation on earth now but to worry not, that he had already defeated the earth.

Hitler brought to a close the Thousand Years of Christ, the "Thousand Year Reich" that the Jews and their dupes so love to mock. He did so in the greatest of honor and glory. All eyes saw it but they didn't know what they were witnessing, or even participating in. And they still do not know to this day.

Now it is Satan's Little Season.

History has been an on-going story of White migration, conquest, settlement, the establishing of great civilizations, the folly which occurs when one becomes too comfortable, the death of these civilizations and the migration anew of the remaining healthy, unpolluted Whites to go on to start the cycle over. People for the past two thousand years have always believed their own time to be the End Time. Life can be pretty miserable but that is a subjective thing and has no bearing on the situation. The End Time approaches because there no longer is any place for Whites to move on to. Satan's lock upon the entire globe is total and complete.

Under the conditions which now universally prevail, it is only a question of time before the White race is eliminated, absorbed into the colored bio-mass. For generations now, longer than anyone now alive can remember, they have been prevented from fully BEING White, that is, from being able to properly worship their God. That means to keep their own culture pure just as it means to keep their bloodline pure as God commanded.

The Bible cautions that any who attempt to put a date to this upcoming, final ending will be found to be automatically wrong.

A false prophet, in other words. But Jesus said that even the gradual onset of spring carries its own unmistakable signs, for those who can see them. The Beast system rules the world. The White race is threatened. Saint John said to cling to what you have and to wait for Christ's return.

He, or they, have assured us that this experiment will not be permitted to go down the drain.

I only tell you that awareness is the key.
